Special Note: At this point the Exodus record lists the first of many laws which God will set forth for His people to follow. So as to avoid the repetition found in the records of Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy, all laws will be presented later in a single collection organized by subject. Now, however, attention turns back to God's final instructions and the promises which he makes as His part of the covenant with the people of Israel.

A Nation Under Law

With the tabernacle now complete, the tribe of Israel is ready to begin functioning as a nation under a covenant relationship with God. The Levites serving as priests become a very important part of this young nation, and the details of the priestly duties and religious ceremonies are directed by God through a number of laws. These laws can be found mostly in Leviticus, but a number of additional laws can be found in Exodus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. In order to get a better understanding of these laws, they will be studied together as a group later on in our reading.
